About Playing for Life

Playing for Life grew out of a fundraising recital supporting PSC Partners Seeking a Cure held in 2016. Since that time, our mission has been expanded to use music as a vehicle to help raise awareness of the ongoing critical need for organ donors. Through music, we are able to reach audiences that traditionally would not be reached through the typical education and awareness programs.

About Jeremy Burke

Jeremy is a graduate of the Indiana University Jacobs School of Music, where he earned his Doctor of Music in Saxophone Performance and Literature under the tutelage of world-renowned saxophonist and master teacher Eugene Rousseau. Prior to entering the doctoral program at IU, Jeremy attended Truman State University studying with Randall Smith.

Jeremy currently resides in Wellston, Ohio with his four children, Eliana, Makenna, Zane, and Galen.

For Jeremy, Playing for Life is also a way of honoring the memory of his younger brother, Philip, who passed away in 2013.
